

There's a good chance that you've been toying with the idea of Amazon FBA as a business model.

You're actually not that far away from hitting ten thousand dollars per month with it.

I thought that my life was over after a career-ending injury turned me into a failed athlete.

It ended up forcing me down the route of becoming a seven-figure seller.

The turning point was not being old school anymore.

Everything changed when I played it smart instead.

Standard ecommerce defeats the whole purpose of becoming an entrepreneur.

It includes trying to create demand out of thin air, letting suppliers eat into your margins, and handling fulfillment by yourself.

This means that you swim upstream, lack control over the business, and become your own bottleneck.

Online arbitrage is about leveraging the most efficient and effective tactics that are available to you.

It includes tapping into existing demand, using economies of scale to your advantage, and letting others take care of fulfillment.

This means that you ride the momentum, get access to premium margins, and focus on the needle-moving tasks.

I'm hosting a free live masterclass where I'll be teaching absolutely everything around this.
